WALKER FACING SEABURY

Investigation of Affairs of City Government Comes to Head Today
ROOM IS CROWDED
Bus Franchise Basis of Questioning

COUNTY COURTHOUSE, NEW ARK, May 25.—Mayor James J.
Walker took the witness stand today at the Hofstadter legislative inquiry into the affairs of New York City, dramatizing an investigation which over a stretch of months has delved into the conduct of his high office.

The mayor was immaculately
dressed in a blue suit, blue shirt with blue collar and a blue handkerchief cockaded from his breast pocket. He took his seat in the witness box at 10:58.

Walker was tendered a waiver
of immunity by Samuel Seabury, chief counsel of the committee. The mayor signed it without comment.

Samuel Seabury, chief counsel of the committee, in tendering the waiver informed the mayor that
"the mere tendering of it carries no implications."

DRAMA EXPECTED

A tense silence gripped the spectators in the crowded courtroom as the dapper, wise-cracking mayor of the largest city in the country faced his arch foe, Sea-bury, to defend himself and his administration against the mountain of innuendo and veiled charges that has been built up against him.

It was Walker, the executive with the sparkling personality, the smart, half-fellow-well-met versus Seabury, the public crusader, the militant reformer, the relentless
cross-examiner, which would win?
That question was on every tongue.

A phalanx of sixty or more newspaper men bent to their task,
with sharpened pencils, Walker began his testimony. The big moments in one of the greatest shows New York had ever witnessed had arrived. From an adjoining room came the muffled, staccato clicking of telegraph machines.

CRISES OF CAREER

Horrific drama the scene was almost without parallel. It was the crisis of Walker's long public career.

Heads His Class

The splendid valedictory address
given at Jackson-twp centralized school last Friday evening by Benjamin Florence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wales Florence, was the third member of this family had the honor of giving.

Benjamin, who graduated in his year's class, follows his sister, Mrs. Ned Walker, (Mabel Florence) near Fox Post Office, and his brother, John Florence, as valedictorian of the class. A fourth member of the family, Nelson Florence, attained the honor of salutatorian.

"Bennie," as he is known to his many friends, does not confine his activities to the class room, however as he had been a member of the Jackson-twp basketball team
for the past several years.

It isn't often that one family can claim three valedictorians and a salutatorian.

Center of Nation's Interest

From a purely municipal affair, the long-awaited clash between Mayor James J. Walker (left), of New York, and Judge Samuel Seabury (right), counsel for the Hofstadter Investigating Committee, has grown to proportions of national importance. Seabury seeks to prove that the Mayor has been guilty of irregularities in office. Should he succeed in proving his charges, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York will be in the embarrassing position of disciplining the Mayor. Coming at a time when Governor Roosevelt is seeking the Democratic nomination for the Presidency, any drastic action against the most popular man in the State of New York would have a marked effect on Roosevelt's Presidential chances.

Skinner Speaks At Pickaway-twp

Progress in Spiritual
Things Stressed by Ohio
Director of Education

15 ARE GRADUATED

School Auditorium Is Crowded for Exercise

A large crowd which attended commencement exercises at Pick-away-twp school Wednesday evening heard an excellent address by Hon. B. O. Skinner, director of education.

Asserting that enough progress has been made in material things in life, the speaker stressed the need of spiritual progress facing the youth of today. To attain spiritual progress, Dr. Skinner said, is far more difficult than to attain material progress because the results of spiritual progress cannot be seen so well.

CITES INDEPENDENCE

The training of youth for independence was also touched upon by the speaker. "Be able to think for yourselves," Dr. Skinner said,
"but always recognize the right of others." Cooperation of the parent and the child was a part of Dr. Skinner's address.

"Youth of today should be disciplined to do the hard things of life," the speaker continued, "in an effort to strengthen character."

Diplomas were presented by Prof. O. L. Buchanan, superintendent of county schools, who headed his short talk with four points,
"Work, Play, Service and Worship."

DEMOCRATS IGNORE DAVEY

Kent Man, Opponent to White, Left Off Executive Committee At Meeting.

COLUMBUS, May 25.—The apparent snubbing of former Congressman Martin L. Davey of Kent, O., by the Democratic state central committee in choosing its executive committee was regarded today in political circles here as a chastisement for his insurgency against the presidential and gov-ernatorial booms for Governor
George White.

Although there were no formal statements, it was reliably learned that Davey was attacked as a "disturber" in a battle led by Frank T. Bore of Tiffin, organization stand-patter.

MRS. MAGRUDER OUT

Observers here considered as significant the ousting of Mrs.
Luetta Feabody Magruder of Shelton, the vice chairman and one of Davey's principal supporters. She was replaced by Mrs. Lena C. Siferd of Lima.

By the committee's action,
Davey, a candidate for governor in 1928 and a leading Democrat for several years, is denied the right to help plan the approaching campaign. The executive committee is the central committee's "board of strategy."

The defeat of Mrs. Magruder was a rout. The count in favor of Mrs. Siferd was 34 to 5, three not voting. In a caucus prior to the balloting, Mrs. Magruder strongly supported Davey for the executive committee, according to leaders of the regulars, who attributed her defeat to that action.

became mean while at the hospital

his home is, or will not tell truthfully.

clared that the kidnapers 'with

COUNTY 'DADS' ENGINEER PLAN HIGHWAY WORK

Commissioners Making Survey of Roads With Sweetman's Aid

TO AID WORKERS

Definite Program Expected Next Monday

The board of county commissioners, John W. Hay, Marvin H.
Dreisbach and Edgar W. Beatty, with J. Howard Sweetman, county engineer, have during the past two days been touring the county road system, preparing to make plans for the 1932 road improvement program.

According to Mr. Hay, president of the board, no program has as yet been outlined, however such work is expected to be done
at next Monday's meeting.

TO BE CONSERVATIVE

The road program is expected to include road widening, gravel treatment and other improvements. It is not known what amount the commissioners expect to spend, but according to Mr.
Hay, "We will spend the least money and attempt to get as much work done as we believe the taxpayers would sanction."

The county engineer and commissioners are working together on the project and hope to work out the program so that much of Pickaway-co's unemployment may be relieved. This will be one of the chief factors in launching the improvement project.

VISIT NEW BRIDGE

The commissioners Tuesday visited the completed piece of bridge work over Greenbrier creek on the Circleville-London-Northern Road, near Derby, where a new concrete slab was put in to replace an old structure. The work, which was approved by the commissioners, was completed by W.

OHIO PLANS TO GATHER RESOURCE

Giant Consolidation of Finance, Industry Planned to Help Conditions

FANCHER AT HEAD

Follows Policy of Leaders
in East

CLEVELAND, May 25.—Modeling a drive similar to the one launched recently in New York, Governor E. R. Fancher of the fourth federal reserve district today revealed plans to mobilize the district's financial and industrial resources in a vast campaign of almost wartime proportions to put frozen and hoarded dollars back to work and loosen credit.

A committee to head the drive to be composed of outstanding executives in the financial and industrial realms of the district, will be announced before the end of this week, Governor Fancher said.

INCLUDES 4 STATES

The fourth federal reserve district is composed of Ohio, and portions of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky.

Like the New York state bank's committee of 12 headed by Owen D. Young, the Cleveland bank committee will seek ways stemming the increasing drain of bank loans and investments
providing easier credit for businesses of deserving projects.

Similar committees are expected to be organized soon in all of the other 10 federal reserve districts of the country. Resident Hoover and Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills both have given their unqualified approval of the program.

Governor Fancher said he had plans yet as to how the committee would function. He performed
he added, to let the committee meet and work out its own plan of stimulating credit and reviving industry and employment. It was expected that the committee may meet next week.

WORK OUTLINED

Work of the committee will be designed to make effective to as high a degree as possible the enormous expansion program of the federal reserve system. This program has supplied a potential bank credit of $7,250,000,000 to the nation through the purchase by federal reserve banks of $725,000,000 of United States securities during the last three years.

Despite this fact, bank loans and investments have continued to drop and a demand has been made for more drastic means of stimulating a price recovery.

Three possible routes to credit expansion developed from the financial meeting of the New York committee which was organized by Governor George L. Harrison of the New York federal reserve bank.
Extension of credit to farm loan banks and to building and loan companies were discussed as possible methods.

The varied and far-reaching contacts of the industrial members of the New York committee was pictured by several leaders as an other potential avenue through which the committee could work inasmuch as these members should be able to call to the attention of the bankers many projects in need and deserving of credit.

BRUNGS IS FINED

Fred Brungs, local youth, was taken to the workhouse at Columbus Wednesday afternoon, where he will begin to serve a sentence of

YOUTHS ATTEMPT TO ENTER HOUSE

ATTEMPTS TO GIVE NEEDY MORE WHEAT

WASHINGTON, May 25.—A proposal that 40,000,000 bushels more of farm board wheat be given to charity was pushed forward today by Rep. Lonergan (D) of Connecticut as unemployment relief legislative plans piled up in Congress.

Declaring that provision must be made against the time when Congress will not be in session, Lonergan introduced a bill allotting the wheat in the next fiscal year.

NO PRIVATE LOANS

In making the proposal, however, he was confronted by information that much of the wheat now held

Youth Ends Life in Rented Plane

Ernest J. Lengyel, 18-year-old Chicago messenger boy, who shot and fatally wounded himself in a sight seeing airplane while soaring over the Municipal Airport in Chicago. The youth, who paid a pilot $3 for the flight, was despondent over being thwarted in his life's ambition to become a pilot. The astonished pilot landed the plane immediately after the youth shot himself.

000 relief program of Speaker Garner was awaited as a basis for legislation.

MAKING CANVASS

Democratic leaders were making a detailed canvass of federal projects that could be carried out with the $1,000,000,000 bond issue proposed by Garner.

Rep. Keller (D) of Illinois, member of the labor committee, came forward with a modification of the plan of Gen. Jacob S. Coxey to issue currency and accept non-interest bearing bonds of the states.

He proposed a $2,000,000,000 fund. It would be used for highway, bridge and grade-crossing elimination projects in the states. The bonds given by the states would be secured by a pledge of all of the revenue derived from gasoline taxes, motor vehicle and driver licenses.

Denying the plan was inflationary Keller said the "great financiers who have so dismally failed to think of anything but objections to every proposed plan to put men to work, will attack this plan as being inflationary."

The relief program bills of the Democratic senatorial subcommittee were being whipped into shape, and hearings may be held before committees while the tax bill is being passed.

The program of President Hoover for expansion of the powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, with two billions more money, waited further conferences with administration spokesmen before a drive is made for enactment.

WATER

The Most Important Thing We Buy

Of all the things we buy, water service is the most important. Yet so convenient is the service, so taken-for-granted, that, in spite of its indispensability, we seldom stop to think how little it costs.

See how your own expenses compare with the averages shown on the chart. You'll be surprised to find how much less you are spending for water service than for almost anything else, irrespective of relative importance.

Ideals and Their Value

THIS is a momentous period for millions of young men and women about to graduate from college and university and "commence" their active participation in the affairs of the world. On other similar occasions there has been a tendency among some to speak lightly of this influx of the school-trained into the channels of life deep-out by the world's practical experience.

"Here come these fine gems out, shaped and polished in the schools," sneered the hard-headed and the practical. "Going up against facts and soon enough tone down their willfulness."

But on the present occasion the graduate of the hard school of practical experience is inclined to speak with less cocksureness. The affairs of the so-called practical world are not fit subject for much bragging on part of those responsible for them, and the need freely acknowledged at the moment is for new leadership and for the counsel based upon principles capable of demonstrating soundness and applicability.

It is quite possible that the greatest need of the world today is a leadership capable of evincing the genius required to make practical scholastic idealism. Many are ready to confess that the individual emphasis on "What is it going to get me?" has been carried too far. Its wider application has produced that egocentric nationalism which blocked international co-operation. "We'll keep our country to ourselves; we'll keep our own trade for ourselves; we'll wall in and shut out and live for ourselves only," says this sense of philosophy. Changes have come about which make such a philosophy impracticable.

We must undoubtedly have industrial planning and educational planning, but we shall not put the economic planning to the front and let education follow. With it all, we must have a higher leadership capable of taking a creative part in the co-ordination of all industries and business at home and in increasing measure abroad and in is to avert economic and political disaster.

If these are the ideals which have dominated the instruction of the young people emerging from the schools, their participation in the affairs of the nations must be welcomed. Surely the demand of the time is for leadership inspired by broader vision and higher idealism.

A Continuing Job

PERMANENT highways have not yet been laid and it is highly probable that they never will be.

The work of road building in any part of the country is not done when the covering of removal from the concrete or asphalt and the shoulders are banked up to the pavement. It will not be long before repairs are required and changes will be deemed necessary. For roads wear out; weather conditions wear heavy damage; great trucks carrying freight carloads smash and break them and pound their surface full of defects.

None of the roads put down, say five to 15 years ago, fully meet present-day requirements. They must be widened; new surface must be laid; curves must be modified; danger spots must be made safer; intersections must be improved; grade crossings must be eliminated. In many instances they must be practically rebuilt.

When road improvement was first started, little was known about building highways as we consider them at present and a great many mistakes were made, not only in the building but in their location. Hard roads were laid in unnecessary places in those years for it was all under the direction of local officials and such a thing as a state system was not contemplated.

The result is that in every state the work of rebuilding is perhaps as extensive as new work.

And this must go on—for there will be little or no reduction in the extent of automotive traffic. We must keep mending and improving our "ways" far after year, making them better all the time. It is a continuous process with its advantages extending not simply to the people using the roads, but to the many thousands of workers rebuilding or reshaping them to current requirements.

"THE LOVE TRAP"

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

SYNOPSIS

Mary Kennedy, pretty secretary, engaged to Buck Landers, wealthy, middle-aged sports promoter, realizes love is greater than riches when she meets young and handsome Steve Moore, Landers' ward. Buck surprises Steve and Mary in their love. When Steve refuses to give up Mary, Landers threatens to frame him. Landers warns Mary Steve's fate depends upon her. He insists that she go with him to his apartment to talk things over. Fearing for Steve's safety, Mary has him move to her boarding house. Then she secretly goes to keep her appointment with Landers. He insists that Mary marry him and Steve leave town. Mary tells him she would rather work as a scrub woman than be his wife. Landers' henchmen knock Steve unconscious when he voluntarily asks them to take him to Landers. Next morning Mary promises Landers she will be reasonable if he will spare Steve.

CHAPTER XXIII

GRIEF, to Mary, was like a stunning blow that confused and jarred the mind. The full intensity of pain would come later.

Rigorously, she suppressed the sensation of suffering and, as a result, the power of the desperate energy within her increased. Fear became transformed into a haggard excitement; her mind clung tenaciously to the thought that she must find and rescue Steve. With an effort of will, she refused to allow herself to anguish over his possible suffering, his danger. Thus, under pressure, she was discovering her own unrealized courage.

She went at once to Buck Landers, but not trembling and uncertain as she had been before. Her dark blue eyes, for the first time, had a hard glint. She was ready to meet his steel with steel.

In his apartment, he looked at her without any expression of love, not even with desire. She had become to him, evidently, an antagonist. This was a struggle, a battle. Romance had fled from Landers, leaving behind a terrible thirst for victory—a hatred for Mary's beauty that could only be assuaged by possession and mastery. But she would have to yield supine and conquered in his arms before the old fires could flame anew.

"I'm glad you decided to be sensible and not lose your head," he said—and she felt he was suppressing a sneer. "It's not going to help you any to get excited—it won't help Steve, either."

"I'm not excited—now," she returned with a trace of vigor. "You're the one who ought to be excited, and afraid, too."

"Yes?" The hint of ill-will remained in his voice.

"Yes. You're smart, Mr. Landers—or you think you are—and I can't see why you imagine you can do terrible things and get away with it. If anything happens to Steve, you'll be punished. You'll be found out—that's absolutely certain. I haven't got your money and your brains, but I can see plain as day that you're in more danger right now than poor Steve—wherever he is—can possibly be. You'll be punished."

He made a sour mouth. "Really? And what makes you think I'm not willing to take that chance, even if what you say might be true? It seems you don't understand me yet. Some day you'll learn I mean what I say—I wouldn't let you and Steve make a dummy out of me—not if I had to take a thousand slim chances. But I haven't taken any chances."

whatever. Only the saps run big risks. But his words beat harmlessly against her. Somehow she was able to stand up to him, as she had never been able to before.

"Suppose I went to the police and told them everything? Why, I could have you arrested, Mr. Landers, even with all your money, just by repeating all the things you said to me."

She looked at him closely and saw, with disappointment, that he was laughing at her. He had been trained to a stony hardness in the rough school of experience, and her own attack was puny against the

"You weren't like this when I first met you," she said in amazement. "And now you act like a fiend!"

"No, I'm just gambling—on a sure thing," he told her confidently. "The cards are marked against you, little Mary. But now let's stop this chin-music, and let me make you my proposition. Steve has disappeared. I'm not going to kid you—I know all about it. Some friends of mine picked him up, and they're holding him. They're tough eggs—the birds that got Steve. If I give the word they'll do anything I say. They'll put him away forever where no-granite wall of his self-possession.

"Don't you realize I could deny every word you accuse me of?" he asked her, contemptuously. "I could produce a dozen witnesses and every one of them would bear out a charge of blackmail against you. Oh, yes; it would be the easiest thing in the world to frame you. It's been done in this town before, you know. But that's all foolishness, Mary. You're no fool—you won't let it come to that. We're not enemies—I'm merely putting some pressure on you, to hold you. It's all for your own good, at that. Are you still crazy about Steve?"

"I love him better than anything on earth!" she declared, warmly. "What have you done to him? Where is he?" Her voice faltered a bit. "Mr. Landers, why don't you drop all of this wickedness? You could be such a wonderful man—soft and kind and good treatment, but you run out on me. The only thing a girl like you can understand is power—force. Do you think I want to go through all this rough stuff? It's the last resort with me. Mary—but I don't hesitate to use it, if necessary. I've got to put the clamps down on you to make a believer out of you. And the simplest way was to get at this young sap you think you're crazy about now."

"So far as Steve is concerned, I don't worry about him at all. When he crossed me he wiped out every ounce of good feeling I had for him. When a man turns against me, he's my enemy. You think you're my enemy now—and that's why I treat you like one—but you'll come back into the fold, never fear."

He had a deadly coolness that was beginning to chill her blood. It was no good arguing with him. His very frankness was entirely brutal.

"If anything happens to Steve, you'll be punished!"

body will find him. Or they might do worse—they might turn him loose, and he'll never be any good to himself or anybody else on this earth. That sounds pretty bad to you, doesn't it? Well, it is pretty bad—but I warned him to keep out. He butted into a play for high stakes—for a woman—and you're the woman, Mary dear. You belong to me and I'll go the limit to keep you. Marry me and, I give you my word of honor, I'll see that Steve is turned loose unhurt. He'll be put on a train for California and he'll have a nice little roll of money in his pocket. You won't have to worry about him, ever. Anyway it's ten to one he'll forget about you inside of a few days. If you really care a darn about this fellow, you can show it by saving him. If you want to be stubborn, you merely sacrifice him to your bull-headedness. That's the lay-out."

His words sounded wild and incredible, but, as she looked at him, she saw that there was a savage intensity—that warned her that she was dealing with a man of a more dangerous type than any she had ever met, or imagined.

"How long will you give me to make a decision?" she asked nervously.

He estimated her with cold, appraising eyes.

"Till tomorrow, say, but on condition—and on this condition only—that you don't complicate things."

"Complicate?"

"It wouldn't do you any good, but you might get a wise idea of blabbing to the cops. If you do that, I promise you, you'll never see Steve again. And besides, you'll be wasting your time—and that's another promise."

Prompt Use of Anti-Toxin Has Cut Lockjaw Fatalities in Half

Immediate Cleansing and Treatment of Every Wound That May Introduce Tetanus or Other Germs Is Urged to Stop the Serious Results of Infection.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

AN injury to the skin in which there has been an entrance of dirt, is dangerous. Such an injury, with the presence of the right germ and if neglected, may result in tetanus.

The same danger attaches to a puncture of the skin with anything that carries dirt into the tissues. Of particular danger are street injuries and gunshot wounds. With the oncoming of the Fourth of July, great precautions should be taken against accidents from blank cartridges and fireworks. Wounds caused by them may be contaminated by the tetanus germ.

Tetanus, or lockjaw, is a disease in which the body becomes stiff, the chewing and swallowing muscles won't work, and severe convulsions occur. It is a dangerous ailment.

In some statistics I saw, it was recorded that 80 per cent of tetanus cases are found in injuries occurring on the street, in homes, gardens or stables. The worst case I ever saw followed a fall from a bicycle, where the palms of the hands were scraped on the gravel of the road. It is far less likely to result from industrial accidents.

Fortunately we now have at our disposal a means of combating this much dreaded disease, for by means of "tetanus antitoxin" it may be prevented.

However, for this treatment to be successful, it should be given immediately after the infliction of any contaminated injury, and in addition to giving the tetanus antitoxin, it is essential that the wound be thoroughly cleansed and receive whatever surgical treatment is necessary.

With the use of antitoxin, the mortality from this disease has been reduced at least one-half. The fatal cases now are usually due to negligence on the part of the patient; so never fail to seek medical advice if you have injured yourself.

Please remember that the antitoxin must be given immediately after receiving the injury, and that when it is given promptly, there is very remote danger of tetanus.

In former years, when tetanus antitoxin was not known, it was customary to cauterize all suspected wounds. This painful and unpleasant procedure is no longer necessary if tetanus antitoxin is given.

Do not misunderstand me. Tetanus antitoxin is not a substitute for local treatment. It is only an occasional wound that is infected with this particular germ, but every wound is subject to infection with other germs, less deadly but nevertheless disagreeable.

If every injury were treated at once, by thorough cleansing and the application of iodine, it would make a great difference in the average of results from wounds.

That newspaper advertising today offers the quickest and most direct method of getting one's story over to the retail buyer.

One of the things that especially affects the department stores today is that their profit line is going downward and their "cost of selling" line is going up. For this reason it behooves the advertising manager of any line of retail business to carefully budget his advertising expenditures and concentrate as much as possible in newspapers because of the low costs of reaching the masses.

While every form of advertising has its place in the general order of things, the fact still remains that newspaper advertising is the quickest medium of telling one's story, getting it read, and getting results from that reading.

Theaters

AT THE CLIFTONA

That the national prohibition question, currently exciting renewed interest in Washington, in editorial columns and over the family breakfast table, is fraught with that much sought-after screen commodity, "thrilling drama," is strikingly evidenced in "The Wet Parade," now on view at the Cliftona theatre.

For this picture contains more thrills, sensational episodes, dramatic heart interest and colorful character portrayals than have been offered the nation since the silent era. Moreover, its vivid plot gains added vigor and attractiveness from the fact that its situations are based on historical occurrences relative to the enactment of prohibition during the second Wilson administration and its modern aftermath of bootleggers, rum-runners and "speakeasy" proprietors.

A view of this ambitious screen production bears out advance reports to the effect that it is one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's most important releases of the year. Its comprehensive settings, the brilliant direction of Victor Fleming and the expert work of so imposing a list of players as Dorothy Jordan, Robert Young, Lewis Stone, Walter Huston, Jimmy Durante, Neil Hamilton, Wallace Ford, Myrna Loy, John Miljan, Joan Marsh, Clara Blandick and Emma Dunn, just to mention a few, establish "The Wet Parade" as one of those rare film spectacles which may be seen for a second and third time with equal interest and enjoyment.

AT THE GRAND

"M-U-R-D-E-R-R!" Blood-crudling shrieks of women stag through the still air of a Paris night; sounds of a terrific struggle come from an apartment house; pandemonium reigns, and passers-by stand frozen with horror. More piercing screams and then silence. Windows fly open in neighboring houses, and citizens finally break down the door of the apartment, only to find it empty.

But they do not know that an enormous gorilla has climbed up the outside of the building and entered the window of the apartment, where two women lay sleeping. In escaping as it came, the animal has carried off the young woman of the household, having previously murdered the mother and stuffed her body up the chimney of the fireplace. And when it has again reached the street below, the ape and its human burden have been met by the waiting carriage of the terrible Dr. Mirakle, scourge of Paris!

This is one of the hair-raising sequences of "Murders in the Rue Morgue," Universal's adaptation of Edgar Allan Poe's strange drama which comes to the Grand Theatre on Wednesday with Bela Lugosi and Sidney Fox in the leading roles.

FIND BURIED CANNON

PHILADELPHIA — An ancient Revolutionary cannon, dug up by subway excavators 40 feet below the surface of Market street here in the central section of the city, was one of the fortification pieces in use when American troops were routed by the British in the battle of Brandywine in September, 1777.

The horse is supposed to be the friend of man, but this doesn't hold good when you place a jockey on the animal.

The Daily Horoscope

Wednesday, May 25, 1932

The morning hours of today, are favorable for those whose work has to do with the exchange of ideas. Writers and teachers should be able to extend their influence under these indications.

Around nine a. m. care is needed in financial activities as there is a marked liability to carelessness and extravagance. Not a time to make loans or go surety for others. All business propositions need to be carefully examined. Much may now be promised which cannot be later fulfilled.

The afternoon holds promise of benefits to individuals during the second week of February, June or October. These people should grasp this opportunity to develop their plans and do what they can to express their ideas in a business way.

People who have any tendency towards heart trouble or defective circulation, will need to restrain themselves today. This applies particularly to those born during the second week in August.

A wise suggestion for today would be to avoid all peculiarities of behavior. Many imagine that the individual is superior to the group and seek to live their own lives in their own way. These people should reflect that were it not for the whole social structure they could not survive.

Children born on this date are usually blessed with considerable self-esteem, but sometimes their ideas may be impractical. Their love is loyal and deep, and they are quite sensitive when such affection is not returned. Boys born on this date, are of independent character, but not sufficiently interested in practical things. They are fond of the mysterious. They have fine sensibilities and would be successful in trades requiring delicate hand work. Girls born on this date are enthusiastic, active and lively; fond of activity and life, and not at all interested in serious things. They excel in handiwork, are of a domestic nature and love to fix up a home.

Among the many distinguished born under this date are: John Alex Dowse, (Elijah II, 1837; Edward Bulwer (Lytton) English novelist and statesman 1803; Ralph Waldo Emerson American poet and essayist, 1803; Vilens Adalidis, German philologist and author, 1867; Johnson, for Midwest Feature Service. OHIO DELEGATES TO FAVOR WET PLANKS

COLUMBUS, May 25.—"On to Chicago for a wet plank!"

This, apparently, was the goal set by members of the Ohio delegations to both the Republican and Democratic national conventions.

Although no formal action has yet been taken on the dry issue by either delegation, persons affiliated with both the G. O. P. and the Democratic state organization were inclined to believe that both delegations will actively join movements at their respective conventions to incorporate wet planks in their national platforms.

Word has reached Republican state headquarters that an informal poll of the Ohio G. O. P. delegates and alternates showed a majority favored the adoption of a wet plank by the Republican national convention which meets in the coliseum at Chicago June 14.

CITE TENDENCY

Belief of "wet" Republicans in Ohio that the Buckeye delegation will ardently espouse the wet cause at the Chicago convention was based upon the fact that David S. Ingalls, Cleveland, the Republican nominee for Governor and Attorney General Gilbert Bettman, G. O. P. candidate for U. S. Senator, are avowed advocates of the repeal of the 18th amendment and favor modification of the Volstead act.

The "wet" aspirations of Buckeye state Republicans also were strengthened by the recent declaration of Postmaster General Walter P. Brown, in an address at Toledo, that the G. O. P. national convention would adopt a platform including a plank that would be "satisfactory" to the "moist" portion of the party.

In view of the fact that U. S. Senator Robert J. E. F. Cleveland, recently renominated at the hands of Ohio Democrats waged his campaigns largely as a "wet," and Gov. George White, during an address before members of the W. C. T. U. here, some weeks ago, publicly endorsed a referendum on the wet-dry issue. Democratic politicians are taking it for granted that the Ohio delegation will enforce a wet plank at the Democratic national convention which convenes at Chicago, June 27.

SHORTY CANTLON

Though the prospect of the nerve-racking grind of the 500-mile Memorial Day race at the Indianapolis Speedway will probably cause some of the youngsters who are driving in the classic for the first time a pang of stage fright, these two speed demons, Deacon Litz and Shorty Cantlon will scorch over the bricks at over 100 miles an hour as nonchalantly as if they were out for a pleasure drive. Both are veteran race drivers and will be right there with the best of the youngsters.

RESERVATIONS MADE

Hotel reservations have been made in Chicago for members of the Ohio delegations to the conventions. According to Republican state headquarters here, practically 80 per cent of the G. O. P. state delegates and alternates have engaged rooms. More than 50 per cent of the Ohio delegation to the Democratic convention have made reservations, according to Mrs. Marie E. McCurry, secretary of the Democratic state executive committee.

Many of the delegates and alternates, it was expected, will motor to Chicago and will visit with relatives and friends during the conventions instead of stopping at hotels.

There will be no special convey rather delegation to Chicago. Officials at Democratic and G. O. P. headquarters here explained that, because of the relatively "short haul" to Chicago, railroad officials said a special train would be impractical.

However, groups of delegates and alternates from certain parts of the state, it was indicated, will travel in special cars attached to some of the regular trains.

SCHORE AHEAD

Ed L. Schorn, Cincinnati, chairman of the Republican state central committee, probably will join other attaches of the Ohio's G. O. P. headquarters in the Stevens hotel several days prior to the opening of the Republican national convention.

Miss McCurry plans to go to Chicago a week in advance of the Democratic national convention and complete arrangements for the Ohio Democratic delegation.

FULL FEEDING OF SPRING PIGS ON PASTURE URGED

Pigs fed a limited amount of grain or concentrates utilize more pasture and require fewer pounds of concentrates per unit of gain but gain more slowly than pigs fed all the grain they care for.

In seven trials conducted by W. L. Robinson, of the Dept. of Animal Industry at Ohio Agric. Experiment Station, pigs getting an average of 3 pounds of concentrates and similar ones getting an average of 5.2 pounds daily a head of corn and tankage made 17.8 and 16.3 pounds of gain in live weight respectively for each bushel of corn consumed. The limited-fed pigs were given approximately 27 pounds and the full-fed pigs took approximately 4 pounds of feed daily for each 100 pounds of live weight. Those getting a full load of concentrates reached a market weight of 200 pounds 10 days earlier than those on the restricted ration.

How prices ordinarily decline in the fall as the number being marketed increases. The average of hogs per 100 pound at Chicago for the 10 year period from 1922-31 was 45 cents higher in September than in October, 70 cents higher in October than in November, and 10 cents higher in November than in December. In spite of this, the price of hogs is higher in the fall and the greater percentage of new or cheaper corn that could have been fed to them when the lower price of the limited-fed hogs and the larger amount of forage they utilized were taken into account, the limited-fed hogs proved less profitable than the full-fed one.

Even if full-fed the majority of pigs fattened after the first of May would not be ready for market before the time a decline in price ordinarily occurs. On the other hand, the saving in grain resulting from feeding a restricted ration to late pigs while they were on pasture was more than offset by their high feed requirement per unit of gain during the finishing period when pasture was no longer available. Hence they not only cost at a less favorable time but their feed and pasture cost was higher than that of similar pigs that were full-fed and that as a consequence were ready for market by the close of the grazing season.

Restricting the grain ration may only with care be justified. The pigs that were given a limited allowance of grain had the same average 120 pounds as those that were full-fed. It was found that they were ready for market during the first half of the season when the price had declined materially.

OUT FIGHTS ON IN RACES FOR HOME RUN HONORS IN LEAGUES

NEW YORK, May 25.—Jimmy Fox of the Athletics, who has courted circuit clouts to his credit, is getting plenty of competition for the home run crown.

The old Master, George Herman Ruth, collected his eleventh of the season yesterday as the Yankees downed the Athletics, 3 to 1, while Jim Collins of the Cardinals hit numbers to and 11 as the Cards outslugged the Cubs. Bill Terry of the Giants and Chick Klein of the Phillies are close behind with nine apiece.

AHEAD OF RECORD

Ruth's four-bagger put him one game ahead of his 1927 record. It was made at the expense of Rube Walberg, the veteran southpaw who is attempting to hold his job as a starting pitcher on the A's. He pitched his head off, holding the Yankees to four blows in seven innings but he was up against unbeatable competition in the person of Vernon (Gokey) Gomez, crack New York southpaw.

Gomez, invited the Machmen to three batters, hung up his seventh triumph of the season and whiffed thirteen men. The latter feat set a new mark for the hurlers of both leagues and increased Lefty's total to 55 strikeouts, the best record of any pitcher in either circuit.

WILSON CONNECTS

The Cubs lost no ground to the league-leading Braves, who fell before Brooklyn 6 to 3. Van Mungo pitched well for the winners and Hack Wilson drove in three runs with a homer, enabling Brooklyn to record its first victory in the Hub this season.

The Traylor's triple with two on base in the twelfth inning gave Pittsburgh a 5 to 3 verdict over Cincinnati.

Detroit took third place in the American league, passing Philadelphia, by shading St. Louis, 6 to 5. Izzy Goldstein, rookie pitcher, was credited with the victory.

The Chicago White Sox made it four wins in a row by outslugging Cleveland, 11 to 7. A five-run rally in the seventh inning put the game on ice.

Veteran Race Drivers Injured Following Speeding Ambulance To California Hospital

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Cliff Bergere, who graduated from movie stunts to automobile racing, has given up rear-seat riding—he was wrecked and injured in a chauffeured sedan while following an ambulance from a racing crash this summer.

Bergere, who is a member of the five-car Studebaker team in the annual 500-mile race at Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30, and Billy Arnold, winner of the 1930 race, were working at Ascot track, California, in a racing picture, "The Crowd Roars." A special stunt rider was severely injured and rushed to the hospital in a studio ambulance. The director, knowing that Bergere and Arnold were familiar with auto crashes, requested that they follow and see that the injured man received the best of attention. He furnished them a studio sedan and chauffeur.

The chauffeur, however, missed the wrong stop sign at the wrong time as he was shooting down the boulevard at 60 miles an hour and another smaller car cut across his path. He turned the heavy sedan over three times attempting to stop it.

Wilbur Shaw and several other race drivers were following, ordered a police ambulance and the two wrecked passengers started on a legitimate ride to the hospital. Bergere suffered a broken rib and adhesions and Arnold had several stitches taken in his head to remedy glass cuts.

"Bergere with his head sticking through what once had been a window in the sedan, looked as if he were in a steam box in a Turkish bath," said Shaw describing the accident.

"I'll do my own crashes from now on," Bergere says. "No more rear-seat riding or driving for me."

WALKER

Continued From Page One

Walker was calm and collected as Seabury walked close to the witness box and began his examination.

"Mr. Mayor, you received the subpoena duces tecum?" said Seabury, in a low voice.

"I did," replied the Mayor, in clipped tone. "At six o'clock the night before last."

"Have you produced any papers in response to it?"

"I have," replied the mayor.

Walker, at Seabury's request, then handed over a box of papers to his interrogator. Seabury had them marked for identification.

Seabury handed the mayor a paper and Walker identified it as a letter which Seabury wrote to him in 1931. The letter called for the names of the banks in which the mayor had accounts and also the names of the brokerage firms with which he had accounts.

"POKER FACE"

Walker wore a "poker face" as the letter was being read into the records. He folded his hands and waited.

The mayor's reply to the letter was also read into the record.

Seabury immediately plunged into the Equitable bus franchise which has been the subject of reams of testimony during previous hearings.

"Mr. Mayor, at the time the Equitable Coach company received its franchise from the board of estimate was there not pending before the board an application of the Service Bus company for a franchise?" Seabury asked.

"I think there was," answered the mayor, quietly.

"There was no substantial difference between the two applications, was there?" inquired Seabury, arching his neck and looking at the witness.

"I have no independent recollection," replied the mayor.

Seabury drew a parallel between the applications of the two bus companies for franchise. (The Equitable happened to get the franchise.) Referring to the records of the board of transportation, Seabury read that the Equitable had 69 routes and the Service Bus company 660 routes.

"Now, Mr. Mayor, do you recall that under the Equitable franchise they had a five-cent fare according to zones?" asked Seabury.

"I don't remember that in detail," replied the mayor, adding that he knew the Equitable had a five-cent fare, but the routes were zoned by the board of transportation.

In response to another question, Walker declared:

"I wouldn't attempt to say in which particular one company was superior to the other."

Slender Silhouette Still the Mode

Tall, Boyish Figure Is Ideal for Newest Summer Styles. Dignity in Frocks Is Latest Decree of Dame Fashion.

Above are a few of the models displayed at a recent exhibition of Summer fashions. Contrary to the predictions of beauty connoisseurs, the slender, boyish silhouette is still enjoying popularity with couturiers. The newest modes are designed to show to the best advantage the tall, slim figure, cut upon boyish lines, but with an effect of statuesque dignity. At left is a Summer frock of organdie, with embroidered batiste, one with an effect of contrasting colors; one with black and white bolero effect, and the other with orange crepe, fitted to the figure. At the right is a beautiful frock of the more demure type. This model illustrates the longer silhouette. It is of pleated chiffon, with a bodice in two shades of green that crosses and ties in back with long, trailing ends. So now, ladies, get that slender figure. Get up in the morning and stretch for the sky until you attain the graceful symmetry that is so necessary if body is to harmonize with the clothes.

American Beauty roses and Gentians.

The pleasure of the luncheon hour was enjoyed throughout the afternoon's bridge game in play at six tables. Favors for scoring were awarded Mrs. G. A. Schleyer, Mrs. Henry Mader and Miss Marvline Howard.

Mrs. Thomas Gephart and Miss Carolyn Bochard of Williamsport were out-of-town guests.
